

Poem

Imagine a World

By: Wesley Correa Carmemarty

Imagine a world where time stand still...

Where nothing you do is of your own free will...

Stripped of your hopes and of your pride...
Surrounded by strangers, no place to hide...

Imagine a place you are told what to wear,
where you are not allowed to grow your hair...

You are told each day you are not to talk,
where all you can do is to sit and wait...

Imagine a world where you have no choice,
you can not even think because of the noise...

A world where you can't work and go hungry,
where you feel worthless each and every day...

A world where days crawl by like a snail,
where all you have to hope for is getting mail...

A world where you have to eat real quick,
sound like a world that would make you sick...

Imagine a world surrounded by walls and wire,
to work away from all this is my greatest desire...

A world like this is hard to conceive, yet I cannot leave, 24/7 this is my reality...