

Writer's Tab

"Something You Should Feel"

You ever given your all to someone just to be let down in the end,
telling you sweet nothings pretending to be a friend?

Ever given a man access to a particular skeleton in your closet, another person finds it because he claim that he lost it?

Can you imagine being brought up on charges for being a crook,
stealing a man's heart with one simple look?

Or what if this fine line was cleverly reversed,
if I stole your heart would you make me reimburse?

Can you picture a man in white being your very true knight,
telling you to keep the faith and continue to hold tight?

Some people say that promises are said and meant to be broken,
that's why some words are best left unspoken.

What else can I offer you besides well orchestrated words,
or mock Daddy lines that you've already heard?

Am I worth the challenge to prove myself to you,
that every word I speak shall surely ring true?

Or what if I'm coming you up just to enter in,
would I mess things up for other righteous men?

What if I told you that my past out-weighed my present,
would you still consider me to be a man to mess with?

All I can say is have faith in me,
and in due time you'll see,

that the true meaning and definition of a companion,
truly lies within me.

- Adrian Eleby